Executive Committee-J. B. Bliven. During the recess Assistant Post-master Arthur L Peale of this city by request gave an interesting talk on Parcels Post. Mr. Peale first congratulated Ponoma grange on the great interest shown by its members on this question, and stated that while the story of the post office was a long one he would confine his remarks chiefly to Rural Delivery and Parcels Post. The speaker stated that the first rural de-livery route was started in Norwich in 1901, and through the untiring ef-forts of the late Congressman Russel and Congressman Higgins we now have county service in New London county with thirty-six rural routes. Norwich has nine rural routes (being the largest rural center in the state) and this reflects great credit on the excellent business foresight of Postmaster William Caruthers, as this large rural population will, no doubt use this parcels post system quite generally, and the patrons and merchants will both derive great benefits therefrom. The postoffice department was cited as the greatest single business enterprise in the world, and with its 60,000 post offices and approximately 40,000 rural routes together with the thousson to predict anything but success for the new departure. Further, the post office department had the ad-vantage over the express companies of having this large rural population to deliver and receive mail from, as the express business was mainly confined to the cities and small towns and villages.

Mr. Feale also spoke in the highest of terms of the excellent business ad-ministration of Postmaster General Hitchcock.
